THE CONSPIRATORS STAY IN CUSTODY.

Ineffectual Efforts to Get Around the Sedition Law-The Prisoners Very Nervous.

Monarchist junta. Many wanted to see and talk with the prisoners, but all were barred out. Even Attorney Creighton was not permitted to interview the trio although he figured as their attorney.

Late in the afternoon the British Vice Consul, Thomas Rain Walker, called and had a talk with the Marshal He particularly wanted to know about Crick, concerning the charges against whom he expressed surprise. He also asked to see the prisoner but the visit was deferred until this morning when the Consul paid a short call upon Crick in his cell. Before he left last evening he asked that the man be made as comfortable as the resources of the station-house would permit.

Marshal Hitchcock saw that all three of the conspirators had good beds with mosquito nettings. They also got plenty to eat, and passed the night in comparative comfort.

This morning British Minister Wode a few inquiries. He did not see the imprisoned men.

At half-past nine the case came up in the District Court, Judge Foster presiding. As the prisoners entered the dock and took their seats it was seen that they were very nervous. They kept twisting and turning, their eyes roved furtively about, they crossed and recrossed their legs and picked at their clothing. There was no effort on the part of any of them to show bravado, On the contrary their faces and attitudes expressed deep dejection.

Attorney-General Smith represented the Government and Attorneys Creighton and Magoon the defendants. When Crick, Walker and Sinclain were ranged in line before the Judge the complaint was read as follows:

"E. J. Hitchcock, being first duly sworn, says: 'That T. B. Walker, conspiracy by maliciously and treasonably conspiring and concerting together, and conspiring and concerting with others to the affiant unknown, to overthrow and put down and destroy by force the Provisional Government of the last three or four weeks. the Hawaiian Islands, and to levy war against said Provisional Government and to oppose by force the authority thereof, and by force to seize, take and possess certain property of said Gov ernment, to wit: the Government building now occupied by the Executive Council of said Government con trary to the authority of the same."

"E. G. HITCHCOCK, "Marshal."

"District Magistrate of Honolulu.

The Attorney-General then asked the court to grant a continuance until Tuesday or Wednesday morning, saying that he was not quite prepared to go ahead with the case. This brought Creighton to his feet and he demanded that, if a continuance should be granted. bail should be allowed.

"I have a letter from the Marshal." said he, "written at the instruction of bail will not be granted. I submit, your honor, that the old bail law has not yet been repealed and that my clients have the right to their liberty. I stand ready to furnish any bail which may be required." Mr. Creighton then criticised the wisdom of the Provisional Government's law under which the arrest of the three men had been made.

Mr. Magoon made an address of the same tenor and the Attorney-General was heard again in explanation of the

The Judge then said that further dis cussion was useless. The letter of the law prevented him from accepting bail and his powers were too limited for him to "construe the statute." He thought, on this account, that such cases should be brought before a court of wider jurisdiction. As to a continuance he saw no reason to deny the request of the Attorney-General, and would there fore fix Wednesday morning at half-past nine for the examination.
